→#INTRODUCTION.#←

The following sketch of the Mack family, is intended to include all the descendants of David Mack, and a few of his ancestors; as a precise and full account of the whole family, covering, as it would, a period of more than two hundred years, would require more time, labor and money for its accomplishment, than the compilers would be able to bestow upon it.

The labor involved in the compilation of the records, comprised in this volume, and in insuring correctness of details, can, of course be conceived of, only, by those who have undertaken a similar work.

In most cases, the writers have been successful in obtaining answers to important queries, through correspondence, but, in a few instances have failed, (after much effort and delay, and from causes unknown to them,) to obtain information in regard to families, and family connections, which it seemed might be easily furnished, and which would have rendered the work much more complete, and much more satisfactory.

The notice of families and individuals is more or less extended, according to the amount of information which was received concerning them.

The writers would make grateful acknowledgements to all who have contributed to the production of this book, and would especially mention the names of John Calvin Smith, Manlius, N. Y.; Lyman Robbins, Mexico, N. Y.; Mrs. Corinth S. Smith, Clyde, N. Y.; Mrs. Julia M. Higley, Windham, Ohio; Mrs.

Harriet Hinsdale, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Laura M. Root, Middlefield, Mass.

Some mistakes may have occurred, but whatever imperfections may be manifest, the earnest interest displayed in the object of these researches will doubtless lead to a favorable consideration of this effort on the part of all who have encouraged the undertaking.

"No man of well regulated mind" says Cobden, "can feel an indifference respecting the genealogy of his family."

SOPHIA SMITH, CHARLES S. SMITH.

GENEALOGY.

Josiah Mack, came from Scotland, and settled in Lyme, Conn. His son, Josiah, was born in 1693, at Lyme, Conn., and died in 1769, at Hebron, Conn., leaving three sons and seven daughters, all of whom were married and had families.

His son Elisha, married Mary, oldest daughter of John Ellis of Sandwich, Mass., who died at the age of eighty-six.

The youngest son of John Ellis, was living at Claremont, N. H., in September, 1837, having been 91 years old the November previous.

Elisha Mack, son of Josiah, grandson of Josiah, born May 25, 1728, in Hebron, Conn., married March 1, 1750, Mary Ellis, who was born September 27, 1733, in Plymouth, Mass., and died June 24, 1819, in Middlefield, Mass. He was suddenly killed May 24, 1783, at Middlefield, Mass.

Descendants of David Mack.

David Mack, son of Elisha, grandson of Josiah, b. Dec. 10, 1750, in Hebron, Conn.; m. April 24, 1774, Mary Talcott, who was b. Sept. 21, 1757, in Hebron, Conn., and d. July 11, 1827, in Middlefield, Mass. He d. March 24, 1845, in Middlefield, Mass.

The following is taken from the tract, entitled: "Col. David Mack, the Faithful Steward," and is inserted in this work, by request.

"He was of Puritan descent; his ancestors were noble ones, for the blood of the Pilgrims ran in their veins, and the love of the Pilgrims' God burned in their hearts."

Col. Mack and his wife had each fifteen brothers and sisters; and Jabez Ellis, his maternal uncle, lived till he was one hundred years and forty days old, and was connected with his wife in marriage seventy-six years.

In those days, family government had not changed hands:

children were subject to their parents. But not so all; there were some who, like the sons of Eli, made themselves vile and were not restrained; and it was among such, that Col. Mack was situated in his youth. But his parents prevented him from running to the same excess of riot.

They absolutely debarred him from attending the fairs, horse races, dances, and other amusements in which his neighbors freely indulged.

And when David—feeling, as he did, that this separating him from all associates, was unreasonable and unjust—ventured to remonstrate with his father, as they were together in the field, the reply of the good man was, "My son, I do this to save you from ruin; for mark me, those young men will assuredly come to a bad end." This prophetic speech was sadly and literally fulfilled; three of them expiated their crimes on the gallows, others were sent to the state prison, and all came to a lamentable and disgraceful end.

Not so, with him who was trained in the way he should go, and did not depart from it when he was old. He honored his father and mother, and his days were long in the land, which the Lord gave him; and that too, notwithstanding imminent exposure to death.

As he removed his family, from Hebron to Middlefield, in crossing the river at Norwich, the unexpectedly high water, swept them rapidly down the current, to the point of being carried over the dam; when looking for death, and the spectators giving them up for lost, Providence, at the moment of despair, ordered a way for their escape safe to land.

Afterwards, as he was hunting in the deep snow in pursuit of a large deer, the animal suddenly turned on him, pressed its antlers against his breast, and set its force feet on both his snowshoes, holding him fast; and thus crippled, it was with difficulty that he got in hand his hunting-knife, and with his number remaining strength, drew it across the deer's throat; when the animal struck him with the hind foot, a terrible blow upon one of his temples, which completely stunned, and almost killed him. As near as he could judge, he lay senseless about an hour. On recovering, his first thought was, "I am dead!" but rising up, he found that the deer was dead, and lying prostrate at his feet.

Thus was he delivered out of his distresses, that he might serve his generation by the will of God, and that God might fulfill the promise of long life to one who honored his parents, not only while they lived, but long after they had departed this life. And not only did Colonel Mack honor his parents "he rose up before the hoary head, and honored the face of the old man." While yet a youth, an aged man of choleric temper had, from some unknown cause, contracted towards him a strong dislike. Meeting him one day, Mr. Mack saluted him respectfully, but received only the unkind rely, "Don't speak to me." "I shall speak to you," said he, "for I have always been accustomed to respect age, and I always intend to do it." This changed his churlishness towards him ever after into civility; thus exemplifying the truth, that, "A soft answer turneth away wrath." It may be remarked that this respect for his parents and the aged was a result of parental fidelity.

The son, thus faithfully dealt with, was in his turn faithful in all his house. He, too, ruled well, having his children in subjection. "My father," says one of them, "excelled in government. He never inflicted punishment without fully setting forth the criminality of the offense, and its evil consequences, calmly and coolly, without excitement or passion; but he did not desist till there was a perfect yielding, a full confession and promise of amendment; and would often add, 'It is because I love you that I punish.'"

"We were," he continues, "kept in on the Sabbath, and taught the catechism, and had other religious instruction, which he faithfully imparted. He never allowed his children to be absent in the evening, without his permission, and he required their return by nine o'clock. And not only did he command his children, but his household. He had for several years, twenty or more in his family, in the summer; and in the most hurrying time of business, he insisted that all under his care, should be present at family devotions, and attend public worship on the Sabbath. If a hired man persisted in using profane language, he dismissed him."

Such fidelity in the stewardship, God crowned with his blessing. He gave him thirteen children, three sons and ten daughters, all of whom lived to be married, and twelve of them became members of the church of Christ. They are honored of God and their country, and their children in their turn, are rising up and calling them blessed. His descendants, living and dead, were, at the time of his decease, about two hundred; there were eight or ten of the fifth generation, his grandchildren's grandchildren. These, as well as his other relatives, he regarded as a high trust, concerning which, God would require an account of his stewardship. For their temporal and spiritual welfare, he labored, prayed, and counselled. As evidence of this, and of his general Christian character, a few extracts will here be given from letters written in the later period of his life; for he brought forth fruit in old age.

Writing to a child, December 10, 1824, he says: "By the grace of God, I have been carried through the various stages of manhood, and am this day seventy-four years old. I have set apart this day for prayer, and have been reading the forty-second Psalm. I have enjoyed in some measure the light of God's countenance. O, it is good to draw night to God, for he has styled himself a prayer-hearing God; and never said to the seed of Jacob, seek my face in vain."

"December 12, Lord's Day. I had great desire to enjoy the light of God's countenance, for which I attempted to pray; and I think my poor feeble attempts were not in vain. My enjoyment continued through the day and evening. Thanks to Almighty God, that he can subdue the hardest heart, and bring such sinful rebels as I am to bow before him. When I look back on my life, and see how I have lived, more than forty years since I experienced religion, if indeed I ever did, I have reason to blush and be ashamed, and repent in dust and ashes. I feel that I have more reason to be thankful to God, than any of the sinful race. If he should see fit to continue me in life, my prayer to him is, that he would make me more faithful in his service, and that the remainder of my days may be filled up with duty and usefulness to God and man."

In 1832, he writes: "Alas! my dear children, with shame and confusion of face, I am often confessing before the throne of grace, that when I would do good, evil is present with me; that while I delight in the law after the inner man, I am so drawn aside by my indwelling corruptions, the snares of the world, and Satan's temptations, that were it not for a strong belief, that I have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, who is the propitiation for our sins, and the sins of the whole world, I could have no confidence towards God, being condemned by my own heart. In short, I can do no other, than allow, that all my best services are defiled with sin, and need to be washed in that fountain, which the Lord has opened for sin and uncleanness."

In 1835, he wrote to a brother: "For many years, I have thought much on the importance of being prepared for death; but it appears to me, that during the last year, I have grown more in the knowledge of Christ, than in any previous year of my life. I can say in my most favored moments, I know him, I love him, I am his, and he is mine. No name awakens such tender and interesting feelings in my mind as his; nor is there any being in the universe, whom I so much delight to honor, or desire to see. And why should it not be so? We are under greater obligations to him than to all the world besides. We have more to do with him, every day of our lives, than with any other being in the universe. No being in heaven so much beloved as he is; none has manifested such love towards us as he has. No wonder that our heart and flesh should cry out for him.

"My dear brother, if you and I are what we profess to be, we shall be in a short time with him, where he is, to behold his glory, which he had with the Father, before the world was. Although my health is good, my reason tells me, the time I have to stay here is short. I often look over my life, to see if I have done anything on which I could place the least dependence, viewing it as righteous in the sight of a holy God; but comparing my life with his holy word, I am constrained to say that in all things, I have come short of my duty. I have no where to go but to God through Christ, and plead for mercy in his name."

Again he writes, Dec. 10, 1835: "My dear children, I am this day eighty-five years old. I have spent most of the day in calling to mind the numerous blessings of which God, in his holy providence, has made me the unworthy partaker, and in reading and meditating upon the 25th and 29th chapters of Genesis, the 34th chapter of Exodus, 32d of Deuteronomy, and the two last chapters of Joshua. I enjoy good health, and have attended meeting every Sabbath this season. When I call to mind what God has done for me, and what miserable improvement I have made of his numerous mercies, I have great reason to be humbled before him."

"December 31st, 1835. In the good providence of God, I am brought to the close of another year. There is no closing year in eternity. The solemn influence of this season is among the means of grace connected with a probationary state.

"My dear children, it becomes you and me, faithfully to examine the foundation of our hope, and see to it, that we are not deceived; that when God shall call us hence we may be prepared for the summons; our work done, and well done, for which 'the time is short.'"

"January 1, 1836. I have been loudly admonished the year past by the deaths of many aged friends. I am the oldest man in town—there is not one living who was here when I came. In one sense I am almost alone; in another, I am not alone. I enjoy the presence and smiles of my Saviour in my room, which is the best of company. I have great enjoyment, on the Sabbath, in going to the house of God, in hearing the Gospel, and in visiting my Christian friends on week days. If I am not deceived, my evidences for heaven are brighter, and my faith stronger, as I advance in life.

"Yet, many times I see myself to be so great a sinner, it seems impossible I should be of that happy number whose sins are forgiven. And yet, I do not despair of mercy on account of the greatness of my sins, for I firmly believe that the atonement which Christ has made is sufficient to atone for my sins and for the sins of the whole world. He 'came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance,' such as feel themselves to be sinners, old sinners."

In 1836, he thus addressed his grandchildren: "My dear and much esteemed grandchildren:—God, in his holy providence, has lengthened out my unprofitable life, much longer than I expected. He has bestowed upon me many blessings. My health is as good as it ever was. I can read with spectacles and some without. My hearing is perfect. Although my health is good, my reason tells me I have but a short time to stay in this world of trouble and sin. May I so live, that when God calls me home, to be here no more, I may be found watching, and enabled, through grace in Christ Jesus, to give up joyfully my spirit to him who gave it.

"It is uncertain whether you will ever hear from your aged grandfather again in this way; will you therefore, my dear grandchildren, allow me to give you a few words of advice? I have great concern for your temporal and spiritual good; and knowing, as I do from experience, how liable young people are to go astray, from the commands of God, into forbidden paths, I would warn you of your danger. Be careful what company you associate with, for such will be your character.

"Never marry for riches or beauty, for beauty is vain and riches take to themselves wings and fly away. Exercise judgment. Be well acquainted with the temper and disposition of your intended bosom friend before you decide. Lay hand suddenly on no one. When you commence housekeeping, be careful to erect the family altar.

"Let me enjoin it upon you, often to read your Bible, with prayer to God, for a right understanding of what you read. Be always ready to do your part in supporting the Gospel. The man who is not willing to support the Gospel, cannot, with propriety, be called a good member of society.

"Despise not the poor, because he is poor. The great object of our existence is to glorify God, in whom we live and have our being, and who bestows all our comforts. Take heed that you faithfully perform all the duties and business of life, from a regard to his commands and with reference to his glory. We are placed in this world to labor for him, (not to become rich and great,) and to do all the good we can. Let it be your aim to have the glory of God as your ultimate end in all you do. I desire to commit you to, and leave you with, the Father of all mercies and God of all grace.

"That you may be directed safely through an evil world to God's heavenly kingdom, is the sincere prayer of your aged grandfather, DAVID MACK."

By such counsels as these, and a corresponding example, and fervent prayers, he was a faithful steward in the care of the children which God gave him, and also of his children's children; and this labor was not in vain in the Lord, for most of his grand-children are hopefully pious.

Col. Mack's early advantages were very limited, for previous to his marriage he had been to school but six weeks. He once expostulated with his father, because he did not give him more opportunity to attend school. His father replied, "David, I never went to school but three weeks in my life; you have been six, and ought to be satisfied." But this did not satisfy him. He afterwards went to the common school of those days with his own children, and spelled in the same class with his son, David, who was six years old.

Thus improving his mind, Col. Mack increased in understanding. He kept along with the progress of the times. He was a friend and patron of learning, and gave large sums in aid of public seminaries. He assisted indigent young men in their studies, and offered his three sons a liberal education.

His life is identified with the entire history of the town in which he lived; in his prime he was prominent in all its public affairs, constantly filling some office of trust and honor, as selectman, assessor, justice of the peace, representative to the legislature, colonel of the militia, and deacon of the church. To this last office he was early appointed, and served in it acceptably until he resigned at seventy-five years of age.

It was principally by his agency that Middlefield was incorporated into a town, the advantages of which were from the first foreseen by him. Having obtained a knowledge of the region while hunting, and defined the boundaries for a new town, he called a meeting of the citizens to consider the matter. approved the object, but dreaded the expense and the opposition of the interested towns. He told them he would undertake the business; if successful, they should defray the expenses; if he failed, the loss should be his own. They consented, and he succeeded. The act of incorporation was granted March 12, It was also mainly through his agency, that the meeting house was erected, in 1791. Previous to this religious meetings were held in his barn and large chambers of his house, and town meetings in his kitchen. He occupied the pew in which he was first seated, fifty-four years, during which period more than thirty, who were at different times his scat mates, deceased.

He attended constantly on divine worship. He was not afraid of the snow and vapor, the stormy wind, rain or distance. He was glad to go; he was joyful in God's house; he sat there with great delight, and the preaching seemed better and better. Col. Mack had a heart for it; and for years, until there was a religious society in Middlefield, he went, on foot, to Chester, six miles, during a great portion of the year. And, in the winter's cold on those mountains, he frequently went with an ox sled, carrying his own and his neighbors' families. This occupied him from sunrise to sunset, and frequently longer.

He had a strong constitution, good health, a keen discernment, sound judgment, and untiring industry. Besides the land on which he settled, then a wilderness, he used facetiously to say, that when he removed to Middlefield, his property consisted of a poor horse, an axe and his wife and child.

Thus it was not much that he had to begin with; but he was industrious, economical, and faithful; so prompt in the payment of his debts, that no one, in any instance, during his long business life, called for money due from him, without his paying it; a peculiar excellence and worthy of all imitation.

He was a merchant as well as a farmer; and he established many young men in the mercantile business in the adjacent towns. He also established in business, the first blacksmith, the first boot and shoemaker, and the first saddle and harness maker, who followed their respective trades in Middlefield.

In those days it was not customary to promote benevolent enterprises, but he was in advance of the times in which he lived. In large sums he bestowed more than eighteen thousand dollars; and his smaller offerings, to promote human welfare, are supposed to have been not less than eighteen thousand dollars more. He was one of the founders of the Hampshire Missionary Society; and he made himself, by his contributions, a life member of twelve benevolent societies; and, at a period when it was regarded as doubtful whether all the missionary societies in the country could support one missionary in a foreign land, he removed that doubt by a donation of one thousand dollars, which, at that time, was an almost unparalleled act of liberality.

In the year 1814, he presented each of his children with a set of Scott's Family Bible, which cost him three hundred and sixty dollars. He left for the church and society, of which he had so long been a member, a fund of three thousand dollars for the support of the Gospel, in all coming time.

Col. Mack was not too faithful. He felt that he had done too little for the Savior who died for him. His hope was in Christ and in him alone. He felt himself to be nothing but a sinner saved by grace. He lived till satisfied with long life. Though his hearing was yet perfect, and his eye scarcely dim, and his natural force not much abated, he did not wish to live longer; his days were full, his work was done, he chose to depart, "and he was not for God took him."

The youngest child was twenty-seven years old, before there was a death in the family.

Ebenezer Emmons, son of Mary, grandson of David, b. May 16, 1799; m. Maria Cone, who was b. Dec. 28, 1801. In his youth he was wild, but he became an excellent man. He entered Williams College when quite young, married before he graduated, studied medicine—first practiced in Chester, Mass., then South Williamstown. While there he had a call from Williamstown Center to take pins from the throat of a child, other physicians having failed. He succeeded so well that they invited him to come and settle there, and while there had the appointment of two professorships, Geology and Chemistry.

After some years he was appointed to make a geological survey of Ohio, and he was so successful that New York invited him to make a survey of that State. He removed to Albany, and while there, wrote several books on Geology, made the beginning of the best cabinet of minerals in that State. He surveyed North Carolina, found gold, purchased a large tract of land—he and his family spending part of the time in North Carolina and part in Albany. When the war broke out he was not permitted to leave, but was obliged to make powder for the rebels. Jeff. Davis sent for him to go to Richmond, to show them how to make it, but Gov. Vance would not let him leave the State. He d. Oct. 1, 1863. His widow resided, in 1878, with her son Ebenezer in Albany, N. Y.

They have three or four children—one, Amanda—married Elias V. B. Conklin; Ebenezer, who is married; Mary, who married Chauncy Watson, a carpet dealer, and, in 1878, resided at Albany, N. Y. The daughters have children, but after sundry efforts, the writers have failed to get information about them.

V.

Harmony Emmons, dau. of Mary, granddau. of David, b. Oct. 1, 1807, in Middlefield, Mass.; m. Nov. 22, 1826, Samuel Hamilton, who was b. March 30, 1799, in Chester, Mass., being one of a family of twelve children. His early life was spent in Chester, working on his father's farm. On the death of his father, he went to Greenfield, N. Y.; was clerk in a store one year—after that time for ten years, he laid stone wall in summer, and taught school in winter. After his marriage, they lived one year in Chester, then removed to Hartford, Conn., and, in 1878, still resided there—being one of Hartford's wealthy men, and an active business man. No children.

David, (the 3d,) son of David, (Jr.,) grandson of David, b. May 23, 1804, in Middlefield, Mass.; m. Aug. 12, 1835, Lucy Maria Kollock Brastow, who was b. Sept. 24, 1809, in Wrentham, Mass.

He was prepared for college at so early an age that it was recommended that he should wait a year, and his father placed him in a family for learning and speaking French exclusively. He graduated at Yale, at the age of nineteen, and studied law with his uncle, Elisha Mack of Salem, and practiced it successfully for two or three years; but his conscience forbade him to try and "make the worse appear the better course," and he decided to abandon a profession which often brought discomfort to his extremely sensitive nature. He then turned to the vocation of teaching, for which he was particularly qualified, as he was by nature a student, and a remarkable linguist, and had a wonderful faculty of imparting his knowledge.

But his chief characteristic was his desire to benefit his fellow men, especially the friendless and oppressed, therefore, he early identified his interests with the anti-slavery cause—going South for a time to teach the "Contrabands," before they were made citizens and taking personal interest in securing freedom to Kansas.

Thinking he saw in the "Community" schemes of forty years ago, a better way of making Christianity a real living thing, he entered into a Community for three years, taking his family with him; but eventually returned to his vocation of teaching, and continued in it, until failing health compelled him to abandon the school.

He was highly respected in the beautiful region he had chosen for his home—Belmont, near Boston—and founded the Public Library there, being its librarian as long as health permitted. Many so depended upon his advice, regarding the books they were to take from the library, that his resignation of the charge was esteemed a public loss. His modesty and reserve made him shrink from anything like publicity or show, yet he was a great admirer of the beautiful in nature and in art. He taught successfully both in New Bedford and Cambridge, Mass.; but, for many years, he has kept, with his wife's assistance, a young ladies' boarding school in Belmont, Mass. He sometimes received into his family young boys, and at one time his class consisted only of them. After abandoning the school, he was always ready to receive his old pupils and friends, to whom it was a great pleasure to see his bright and loving face, and to listen to his ever kind and instructive conversation. He d. July 24, 1878, at Belmont, Mass.

He graduated at Amherst College, in 1831, went to Auburn Theological Seminary; preached a little more than twenty years in Central New York, in the following places: Camillus, Morrisville, Preble and LaFayette. Afterwards, he preached at Middlefield, Mass., 5 years. After leaving Middlefield, and at the time of his death, he was chaplain of the House of Correction in Springfield, Mass. He d. July 12, 1865, at Albany, N. Y., and was buried in W. Springfield, Mass. On his headstone were engraved these words: "Fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." Fitting words for one so prayerful, active and successful. In 1878, she resided at Amherst, Mass.

Naney Amelia, dau. of Julia, granddau. of David, Jr., b. Aug. 14, 1843; m. July 11, 1862, Samuel Colville Vance, who was b. Aug. 22, 1839, in Indianapolis, Indiana. He entered the class of '62, at Amherst College, the first term of Sophomore year, leaving it at the commencement of Senior year, to join the army, but returning and graduating with the class. He was captain in the 27th Mass. Regiment, major, and afterwards colonel of the 132d Indiana Volunteers. He served in battles of Roanoke and Newbern, N. C., and Russellville, Ky. He was mustered out at Indianapolis, Sept. 5, 1863. Re-enlisted in 1864, organizing and taking command of a regiment of home guards from May to September. She d. April 13, 1863, in Indianapolis, Ind. In 1878, he resided in Indianapolis, Ind.

V.

Samuel E. Mack, son of David, Jr., grandson of David, b. Nov. 8, 1815, in Middlefield, Mass.; m. Sept. 7, 1841, Rebecca Robins, who was b. April 3, 1814.

In early life he commenced mercantile business in Amherst, Mass., where he continued until about the year 1848, when he removed to Cincinnati, and subsequently became connected with the general agency, in that city, of the Protection Insurance Company of Hartford, Conn., and continued those relations until the suspension of business by that company, in 1854. In the spring of 1855, he was appointed by the Home Insurance Company of New York, local agent for Cincinnati, and the officers and directors of that company soon became so impressed with the sterling qualities which made up his character, both as a judicious underwriter and as a man of unswerving rectitude, that they extended to him their confidence in the appointment to the position of special agent for the supervision of their agencies in the State of Ohio and other States adjacent. The confidence thus reposed in him by that company, and his own frank and honest demeanor which commended him to all with whom he came in contact, soon led other kindred institutions to place their agencies in his hands, and in the course of three or fours years he established a business in Cincinnati, not only of respectable dimensions but conducted in such an honorable and straight-forward manner as to command respect, not only of the fraternity, but of the whole community.

In 1858, when the Home Insurance Company, of New York, transferred its general agency from Cincinnati to St. Louis, he was sent there to supervise the large Western and Southern business of that company. He brought with him the reputation of a man of vigorous intellect, spotless integrity and purity of character, and excellent capacity for business. This reputation he well sustained until his death, Dec. 16, 1866, earning for himself the respect and confidence of the public in the transaction of business, and commanding the cordial frendship of the large number whom he counted among his personal acquaintances.

Noticeable among his personal traits, was his benignity of disposition and his gentle kindness, the benefits of which were realized by many who were in want of substantial aid. In dying, he left behind him the memory of an energetic, honest christian gentleman; one, who so unostentatiously carried his christian character with him, and made it a part of his daily life, controlling and guiding him in all his transactions with his fellow men, whether in his private or official relations, that he commanded the esteem and respect of all who knew him, and very many outside of his own bereaved family—mourn with them that they "shall see his face no more," and are deprived of the benefits of his experience and counsels. In 1878, his widow resided at St. Louis, Mo.

Descendants of Mindwell Mack.

Mindwell Mack, dau. of David, granddau. of Elisha, b. Sept. 6, 1779, in Middlefield, Mass.; m. Dec. 9, 1799, Ichabod Emmons, who was b. March 18, 1778, in East Haddam, Conn. She d. June 23, 1862. He d. April 26, 1839. He was the oldest of seven children and went to Middlefield, Mass., when young, and learned the blacksmith trade of his uncle and brother-in-law Ebenezer; married, returned to E. Haddam, where he remained two years, then removed to Hinsdale, Mass., and bought a poor farm of his father Mack, promising to pay a large price for the farm—but really not expecting to pay much for it, thinking that eventually his father Mack would give it to him—but such were not the plans of Mr. Mack. He told Mr. Emmons he would take anything for pay, so sometimes a few pigs, also young cattle would be driven to Middlefield, and at one time he had some two hundred dollars of Pittsfield money, which he paid him and in a few days the bank failed, Mr. Mack still having the money in his possession—but said nothing of his loss.

Afterwards Mr. Emmons had eighty dollars in money of a New Haven bank which failed—Mr. Mack came to condole with him—but did not mention it until just before leaving, when he shook hands with him, and said I am sorry for you—at the same time leaving a roll of bills in his hand, which Mr. Emmons did not look at until Mr. Mack had gone, and then he found the worthless Pittsfield money he had paid his father-in-law.

Mr. Emmons acquired the title of Major by being major of the regiment which "used to muster about the hill towns in the grand old days of gingerbread and new cider." He was one of the best known wags in Western Massachusetts, and perhaps some of his sayings and witticisms may be interesting.

He represented the town many times in the Legislature, and was there noted for his short speeches and witty sayings. He was the one who introduced the bill to have sheep and ministers taxed. While in Boston, he was often invited to parties and was ever a welcome guest. He was not very particular about his dress—some one asking him why he did not dress better, was answered: "Do you suppose I would wear my best clothes in Boston?"

He was once asked by an editor of a democratic paper, how it happened that his son should remain postmaster so long, when there had been a change in the administration. His reply was that there was but one democrat in town and he could not write his name.

One time at his boarding house, they had pigeons—and had enough for all save one—the Major was not served; there being a turkey in front of him, he drew it to his plate, saying, every man for his bird, thus turning the joke in his favor.

He went to see the corner stone laid for Bunker Hill monument. He joined the Monument Association and each member had a paper with the picture of the monument on it.

Daniel Webster, of whom Mr. Emmons was a great admirer, was chosen speaker, and Mr. Emmons was desirous of getting inside the grounds, where he could see and hear, but hardly knew how to manage, as there were none admitted but ladies and officials; however, rolling up his parchment, he walked along unconcernedly, right past the guard, who stepped aside, no doubt thinking he was one of "the powers," thus securing for himself a seat very near Daniel Webster. The procession soon came up, with the box to be placed in the corner stone. It was on a truck drawn by four beautiful horses, and Mr. Emmons standing near the corner, stepped forward and lifted the box from the truck, placed it in position, stepped aside, leaving the masons to carry out their programme.

Mr. Emmons was a farmer, but a poor workman at his trade; however, making money shoeing horses, and living on the turnpike road from Albany to Boston, he often worked all night, receiving $1.25 for shoeing a horse all around, his son Noadiah holding a light for him and receiving six cents a shoe.

One little item to show his skill as a blacksmith: he thought he would make a ploughshare, he heated it, and hammered it so long, that the pattern became too small for a ploughshare, so he thought he would make it into a horse-shoe; but he hammered it till it was too small for a horse-shoe, then he thought he would make a horse nail, but he hammered it till the pattern was too small for a horse nail, then he said he knew he could make a fizzle of it, so he struck it with his hammer, the sparks flew all around and the fizzle was made.

He was an indulgent parent, rarely rebuking his children, loving to see them happy, and all others, doing all he could to make them so. The children were early instructed in the catechism and Bible, and were kept very strict on the Sabbath. He was ill quite a long time with the dropsy, and when on his death bed, he called his family around him, bade them good bye, requesting them all to leave the room, as he said he wished to be alone with his Maker.

He then entered a store as clerk, and stayed until the merchant died, when he bought the goods in company with his brother. He was postmaster and his brother, assistant, for more than thirty years. He was a very kindhearted man, kind and over indulgent to his children, very kind to the poor, often after he had closed the store for the night, filling a basket with provisions and carrying it to some poor family. The brothers were very easy with those who owed them, never taking advantage of a poor man to enrich themselves.

His health was poor for two or three years before his death, which occurred Dec. 8, 1865.

In 1878, his widow resided at Hinsdale, Mass.

father had lived. He held nearly every town and church office, always lending a helping hand in every good work, doing what good he could for others. At the time Mary Lyon was soliciting funds to build Mt. Holyoke Sem., she made his house her home, he promising that his daughter, then an infant, should be educated at the seminary.

He was strictly a temperate man, using nothing but cold water as a beverage and was a healthy and robust man.

He was Captain of a company of State militia four years; when the company disbanded.

About the year 1848, he was sent to Boston as a member of the Legislature, where he took a sudden cold, causing inflammatory rheumatism, from which he never fully recovered, and he died Nov. 14, 1851. His widow lives with her children, and in 1878, resided at West Springfield, Mass.

CHILDREN—(All born in Windham, Ohio):

- I. Julia Maria, b. June 20, 1833.
- II. William Hanaford, b. July 19, 1835. When a young boy he was remarkably bright and intelligent, noted for courage, bravery, industry and truthfulness of character—no duty too arduous. In 1859, he went with his brother, Isaac, to Nebraska and they took up a large tract of land, built a cabin, had a span of horses, guns, stove and cooking utensils. They were located ten miles from white settlers, among the Indians. One day they went five miles to cut cotton wood; on returning at night, saw the prairie on fire, and as they drew nearer there was no cabin to be seen. The Indians built fires, set the prairie grass on fire, and cabin, horses, clothing, all consumed! They walked ten miles to nearest settlers, and it so happened there was a returned Californian stopping there, for the night. Being so discouraged they offered to sell their claim to him, which he purchased, paying to them the gold for it. They then bought a yoke of oxen and a cart, and started for Pike's Peak; enduring untold hardships while crossing Isaac then went to California, and William the plains. lived among the Indians, took up tracts of land, located on Platte River, and also town lots in Denver, and tried to farm it, but to his surprise he could not raise a hill of beans, nor a potato—(at that time '59 it was not known that it was necessary to irrigate),—and he thought he should starve to death—saw perilous times, subsisted on wild game; tried to sell his ranche, but no one would buy; said the land was "good for nothing."

He let his land lie, paid his taxes, went to mining in Montana Territory, was successful; returning to Denver, after ten years' absence, found it a thriving town, and his real estate very valuable, He has also been engaged in mining in the San Juan Silver mines—and prospecting for claims in the Black Hills. He is a great traveller, a thorough student, a close observer, very interesting in conversation, a noble looking man—and, in 1878, resided at Denver, Colorado.

III. Isaac Theodore, b. Oct. 14, 1838. He went with his brother William to Nebraska and Pike's Peak. While there, he thought it such a forsaken country, he went with a party to California—and being consumptive, he felt that he could not live in any other climate. He was fond of study, travel, quiet in his deportment, truthful and industrious. For years, he was engaged in mining in the silver mines of Nevada. He d. near San Bernardina, California, March 8, 1871.

- IV. Horace Taylor, b. Jan'y 21, 1841. He was a very fine musician, playing on either wind or string instruments, tuning pianos, also pipe organs. He was leader of a band during the rebellion, and followed Gen. Sherman to the sea. He was very jovial in disposition—a great favorite among his associates. He spent three years in Australia, from there, went to Hong Kong, China, and, at the time of his death, was teaching music in the American Colony. He was drowned in the harbor of Hong Kong, June 30, 1872, and his body was recovered and buried in Hong Kong. He was expecting to go to Germany to finish his musical education.

Descendants of Phebe Mack.

Phebe Mack, dau. of David, granddau. of Elisha, b. June 30, 1786; m. Jan'y 11, 1810, Uriah Church, who was b. April 30, 1785. He was a manufacturer of woolen goods and supplied to some extent, the Government, with goods during the war of 1812. The process of manufacturing was very slow, and mostly by hand power. The spinning, weaving, and dyeing, was at first done at the homestead located about two miles from the "carding machine," which was in the "Hollow." From small beginnings the business increased, new machinery was put in operation and the whole process of making cloth was in due time, carried on in what was known in after years as the "old factory." 1823, a new building was erected for increasing business. was attended with disaster, quite disheartening, but in due time was filled with machinery, not the labor saving machinery of the present day. The Spinning Jenny and Loom were worked by hand power and mostly by men of foreign birth. Woolen broad cloths of various shades were the chief products.

In the year 1847, another three-story mill was erected. It compared well with the other or "Upper Mill," in its capacity, and designed for carrying on every branch of the business. About this time black broad cloths with cotton warp were made a specialty, and by superior skill they were made so as to command the highest price in the New York and Boston markets. He d. May 14, 1851, and his widow May 21, 1851.

Since his death the firm has been S. U. Church Bros. For several years the business yielded but a small profit, but during and subsequent to the War of the Rebellion, the demand for this style of goods increased and prices advanced. Serious drawbacks in the business were felt by the firm in the burning of their upper mill and afterwards by the great freshet of 1874, but they were overcome, and to-day another and much better mill stands upon the site of the one destroyed, and scarcely a sign of the destruction by the flood remains to be seen. They in common with the whole country, have felt the "hard times," and suspended making for a time, but at the present time have both mills in full operation.

He remained at home during his younger days, and worked in his father's woolen factory, having few holidays and few amuse-The principal and perhaps the only ones, were "Fourth of July," "Training Days," and "Thanksgiving." Factory work was very distasteful, and very natural it was for him to think about learning to do something more agreeable. He concluded that to become a merchant would suit him better than any trade or profession, and after sundry efforts a situation was obtained for him in a store in the town of Amherst, Mass., where he remained six years, during that time uniting with the Congregational church and taking an active part in the Sabbath School. In 1840, he was induced to take a position as book keeper in a wholesale importing house in New York City. Here, he was exposed to many dangers and temptations, but by endeavoring to keep withing the circle of religious influence and engaging in Church and Mission Sunday School Work, he escaped untarnished.

After two years he was induced "to go West," when he located in Elyria, Ohio, and engaged in the business of selling goods. In 1849, he removed to Cincinnati, where he resided in 1878, and his business for many years has been the settling of loss claims for insurance companies.

In 1867, he joined an excursion party, in New York, destined to distant parts of the world, being mentioned in Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad." On board the steamer Quaker City he visited a large number of places of interest in Europe, Asia and Africa, including Egypt and the "Holy Land." In 1872, he was appointed Insurance Commissioner for the State of Ohio, which office he held three years, at the close of which it was generally acknowledged in other States, that Ohio had the best Insurance Department in the Union. He is a man very highly esteemed and respected. They have no children.

Azariah Smith, son of Zilpah, grandson of David, b. Feb'y 16, 1817, in Manlius, N. Y.; m. July 6, 1848, Corinth Sarah Elder, who was b. Jan'y 24, 1820, in Cortlandville, N. Y. He was a graduate of Yale College, Yale Medical Institute, New Haven Theological Seminary, attended a course of lectures at the law school. He was ordained Aug. 30, 1842, at Manlius, N. Y., as an Evangelist to labor in Foreign fields; sailed as a missionary of the A. B. C. F. M. from Boston for Smyrna, Nov. 10, 1842; expecting to join Dr. Grant at Mosul and engage with him and others in labors for the Mt. Nestorians. Disturbances in the country prevented his obtaining a passport and the accomplishment of his plans was delayed, until 1844. He reached Mosul but a short time previous to Dr. Grant's death. Finding the Nestorians greatly diminished and scattered by the war, it was thought wise to disband the mission and he returned to the seacoast. (It was on this journey that Dr. Smith first learned that there were a few men inquiring after Truth, living in the city of Aintab, Syria.) Having reached the seacoast, he soon connected himself with the Armenian Turkish Mission. His medical skill called him from place to place and it was not till the fall of 1845, that he became a resident of Erzeroon, Asia Minor, and he labored till July, 1847.

In 1846, while absent, his house was mobbed by the Armenians, because of his having received into his house an Armenian Priest, who was inquiring after Truth, but God overruled it for good.

In the fall of 1847, he was commissioned to labor in Aintab, Syria. He reached the city in December, having been delayed by an attack of cholera while journeying. He found the light flickering and apparently just ready to go out, but the Lord had a great and glorious work in store for him. His legal, medical and Biblical knowledge were brought into requisition and from early morn till late at night, body, soul and mind were found "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," till June 3, 1851, when after a short but painful illness, the Lord called him to enter into his rest.

His wife, Corinth S. (Elder) Smith, continued for two more years, to labor with the women, going from house to house, when a severe sickness compelled her return to this country. She was, in 1878, making her home at Rev. Addison K. Strong's, Clyde, N. Y.

II.

Maria D. Root, dau. of Laura, granddau. of David, b. Dec. 31, 1817, in Middlefield, Mass.; m. Mar. 15, 1840, Matthew Smith, Jr., who was b. Sept. 13, 1814, in Middlefield, Mass. He was engaged in teaching for many years, was one of the Board of Selectmen, and represented his district in the Legislature in 1878. He is a man of public spirit, was chiefly instrumental in the formation of the Highland Agricultural Society, and donated the land which is used as their Fair Ground. He has been a merchant, and a farmer, and in 1878, resided in Middlefield. They celebrated their silver wedding, March 15, 1865, and as the golden wedding of her parents occurred on the 16th, it seemed most suitable to the parties, unitedly, to celebrate two events of so unusual an occurrence, and so nearly simultaneous. Accordingly, preparations were made and invitations given, to meet at the house of Matthew Smith, on the evening of March 15th.

This house and the farm connected with it, had been in the Mack family since the first settlement of the town.

In the spring of 1775, Dea. David Mack settled in Middlefield, and six years after built the house in which the weddings were celebrated. About one hundred relatives were invited, of whom eighty-four were present, being, by a singular coincidence, exactly the number of years the house had been The large and commodious house was thrown open, from basement to attic, and all parts of the house were vocal with mirth and festivity. Refreshments were served at ten o'clock, and at midnight, the time when the two days met, the guests were assembled in the parlors and dining-room, when John Smith, of Boston, only brother of Matthew Smith, and son-in-law of the golden bride and groom, introduced the speeches of the occasion, in some happy remarks, touching upon many incidents and associations connected with the earlier years of the parties, whose weddings were being celebrated and bringing smiles and tears, in quick succession, to the faces of many friends. He was followed by S. F. Root, son of Mr. and Mrs. Root, who gave many interesting family statistics, some of the most pertinent of which were, that the golden bride was born and married in the same room in which she was now celebrating her golden wedding; that the silver bride was also born in the same room; that both of the maternal grandparents of the silver bride, and both of the maternal grandparents of the silver groom, died in the same room; and twelve weddings had been solemnized in the same room, at ten of which, the same minister officiated. In the eighty-four years in which the house had been built, only six deaths had occurred.

Appropriate speeches were made by others, among whom were Metcalf J. Smith of Middlefield, E. P. Smith of Amherst College, and Lyman Payne of Hinsdale. Mr. and Mrs. Root and Mr. Smith replied feelingly and made every one glad that they were there. It was both a sad and joyous occasion. Among the sorrowful thoughts, was the fact that on the first of April, the old homestead, that for ninety years had been owned by Dea. Mack and his descendants, was to pass into the hands of strangers, and its history no longer be connected with the history of the Mack family.
